1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

- (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.
- 2. Claims 1-21 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hashimoto in view of Szycher.
- 3. Hashimoto discloses polyurethane sealing gaskets made from polyurethane prepolymers having a functionality of 2-3 and the NCO content specified in the applicants' claims and polyols having OH numbers of 57 and 67 and functionalities of 2-3 (see example 4). He discloses using polyols having molecular weights of 400-3000 (col. 4, line 54, and teaches that mixtures of any of these can be used. He reacts the gasket components on the surface of the caps to from integral gaskets (see examples). He shows the same properties as the claims (col. 2, lines 18-19, 24-25), and he discloses no weight loss of the gasket over time (see abstract), which would mean that nothing is extracted from the gasket. He differs from the claims by using an aromatic polyisocyanate (diphenylmethane based MDI) versus using an aliphatic or cycloaliphatic polyisocyanate, and he forms the gasket at lower temperatures.
- 4. Szycher discloses that cycloaliphatic polyisocyanates are more hydrolytically stable than MDI (bottom page 4-31 top page 4-32), and lower in reactivity.
- 5. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use cycloaliphatic polyisocyanate rather than MDI in Hashimoto's gaskets because Szycher teaches its better hydrolytic stability. It would be obvious to process a less reactive polyisocyanate at higher temperatures.

6. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Rachel F. Gorr whose telephone number is 703-308-3608. The examiner can normally be reached on Mon., Tues., Thurs., Fri., from 7:00 AM to 5:30 PM.
